Nursing School Presents New Enrichment Series

The Boston College School of Nursing presented the first session of the third Professional Enrichment Series on Tuesday, October 29. The series, in recognition of the responsibility of the university to continue the professional enrichment of its Alumni, is designed to acquaint alumnae with the most recent technological, cultural, and professional advances in the field of nursing.

This year's series is geared to investigate the extended role of the nurse. In line with this theme, the speaker for the first session, Miss Florence Flores, R.N., Director of Nursing at the University Hospital of the Boston University Medical Center, spoke on the topic: "Changes I Have Seen in Nursing Service."

The series was initiated in the spring of 1967 and was met with such response that it had to be repeated in the fall. The second series was held in the spring of 1968 and was conducted in various hospitals in the Boston area, emphasizing the practical aspects of the modern care of patients.

Dates and specific topics for future sessions of the present series have not yet been determined, although all interested in this information may obtain it from the chairman of the program, Mrs. Marie Andrews, at the Boston College School of Nursing.

In a ceremony marked by academic pomp and attended by approximately 3700 dignitaries, the Very Reverend W. Seavey Joyce, S.J. was inaugurated as the twenty-third President of Boston College. Included in those present at the ceremony were Governor John Volpe of Massachusetts, Mayor Kevin White of Boston, representatives of most of the nation's universities, the entire faculty and administrative staff, and a large portion of the student body. The inauguration was the first in the college's 105 year history.

The inauguration of Father Joyce, who became President on July 1, culminates a long career of service to the university and the community. Father Joyce, who is celebrating his twenty-fifth year of priesthood, has been a member of the Economics faculty, and later its Chairman, Dean of the Business School, a Trustee of the University, and Vice-President for Community Relations. Taking part in the vital work of solving Boston's urban crises, he has involved himself with such organizations as the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, the Chamber of Commerce, United Community Services, the National Municipal League, and the Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

The inaugural ceremony began with the procession of several hundred of the attending dignitaries, wearing their variously colored academic robes, from Bapst Library to McHugh Forum, where the inauguration took place. After an invocation by Walter G. Muelder, Dean of the Boston University Theology Department, the program provided for a series of welcoming speeches and Father Joyce's Inaugural address.

Governor Volpe, greeting the new President on behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, remarked that Father Joyce is taking the helm at Boston College "at a time of the university's greatest growth and progress, its rise in the past 10 years from the status of a local institution to that of a national Catholic university." Commenting on the challenge confronting Father Joyce, he said "When ivy-clad campuses have turned into something like 'combat zones' it requires a brave man to take on the job of college president." Referring to the task of raising money for the college's expansion the Governor explained, "The challenge can never begin to be expressed by a monetary price tag... the challenge remains now, as always, in the realm of human spirit."

Mayor White, after expressing his gratitude to the new president for his service to Boston, commented on Boston

Rockefeller Foundation Grant Aids Health Profession Problems

The severe shortage of personnel from minority and low income groups in all aspects of the health professions is a problem being faced by Boston College and the Greater Boston Chapter of the Medical Committee for Human Rights.

A Rockefeller Foundation $14,998 grant is supporting the planning program which will inform, encourage, tutor, and promote funds for minority groups to enter the health professions.

Problem in promoting careers in the health professions include a lack of knowledge about the range of opportunities in the health field; rigidity in curriculum and admissions patterns in health occupation schools; inadequacy of funds for tuition and grants.

Through the Rockefeller grant, the planning program will coordinate the activities of volunteers; follow-up students enrolled in the summer reading program; begin to identify members of health occupations living in Boston; collect data about courses in public and parochial schools, and work with colleges and universities who are teaching remedial reading or conducting special enrichment programs.

Public Affairs Bureau Sponsors Municipal Training Program

The Boston College Bureau of Public Affairs is offering training for municipal employees Wednesday evenings at the Law School from September 25 to December 18. The program, called The Massachusetts Municipal Training Institute, was established in 1964 to offset a lack of this type of training in New England, and is designed to give municipal employees an opportunity to gain professional knowledge in their field.

The courses offered this fall are Municipal Finance and Budgeting, and Municipal Collective Bargaining. The lecturers for the courses, who split the format evenly into lecture and discussion periods, are selected for both their teaching ability and their practical experience. Exemplifying these assets are the two lecturers for this fall, Tom Hourigan, the lecturer for the Collective Bargaining course, is presently personnel director of the Norton Company and President of the Massachusetts Municipal Personnel Associates. Frank Mauritz, the lecturer for the Finance course, is controller of the Town of Brookline.

The courses offered this fall have attracted some eminent figures in the municipal field, including Stephen McCuskey,

UNIVERSITY TUITION TO BE INCREASED IN 69

The Board of Trustees have announced that the tuition in the undergraduate schools of the university will be increased by $400 beginning in September of 1969. The present tuition of $1600 will remain in effect for the current academic year.

The Trustees have noted that tuition costs at Boston College, in relation to other universities of similar size and quality, have been low, and even with next year's increase, the tuition costs will still remain at the lower end of the general range.

As is the case in nearly every modern university, the costs of higher education reflect an ever upward spiral. Important among the cost factors at Boston College is the increase in the number of faculty and, in the words of the Trustees, "our constant improvement in the quality of education offered at this institution through our faculty and facilities."

member and former chairman of the Massachusetts Labor Relations Board; Joseph Gallagher, Vice-President in charge of Municipal Securities of the First National Bank of Boston; and Thomas Callahan, a selectman for 26 years of the town of Dalton.

Completion of the courses has been listed as a factor in the promotion of several men to their present positions. Mr. Hagan, the town engineer of Arlington, and Mr. Cronin, the executive secretary of Milton are outstanding examples.

Courses to be offered in the spring session are: Planning and Zoning Administration, Federal Aid Programs, Municipal Management and Organization, and Code Enforcement. All enquiries concerning the program should be addressed to Mr. Fred Conley, Bureau of Public Affairs, Boston College.

Forty students in the second and third year of the Law School, after some extensive study and planning, have commenced an experiment in providing legal services to those who cannot afford counsel. LOST ALUMNI

Although we try to keep our alumni records in excellent order at all times, over the years the addresses of some alumni have become lost. This status often occurs when a person moves, or in the case of our alumnae when the girl graduate is married. In order to restore to many alumni addresses as possible to active status, we are publishing below a first of a group of listings of "lost" alumni.

If you, our readers, can identify any of the following alumni, please complete the information in the address form provided below. We plan to make this a regular feature of the Alumni News and will keep you informed of the results.

New England Society of Electron Microscopists has Meeting at Boston College

The N.E. Society of Electron Microscopists is a division of the larger and older American Society of Electron Microscopists. The New England Society, which is two years old, draws its membership of over 100 from biological and industrial scientists of New England, and includes some student members.

This technical society which meets every two months at a different institution, convened its last meeting at Boston College on Oct. 9. The meetings are a means for the members to come together for the purpose of exchanging ideas, information, data of experimentation, etc. on electron microscopes, the world's most advanced and powerful. (Electron microscopes magnify the specimen 200,000 times larger than the specimen's actual size.)

The Society is governed by an executive committee of which Rev. William Sullivan, S.J., Chairman, of the Boston College Philosophy Dept., is the Treasurer.

Puerto Rico Scene of New Graduate Business Program

Early in October, the Boston College Executive Development Program conducted a conference for scientific administrators involved with the management of research and development activities in Puerto Rico. The program, conducted in the Mayaguez Hilton Hotel was co-sponsored by the Puerto Rican Science and Technology Center, the Puerto Rican Economic Development Administration and the Puerto Rican Manufacturers Association.

This conference was a result of numerous discussions between College of Business personnel and the Presidents Scientific Advisory Committee. A basic interest aimed at broadening the scientific base of Puerto Rican industry resulted in the presentation of a special program proposal to Dr. Carlos Vincent, Director of Industrial Research in the Economic Development Administration of Puerto Rico.

The basic economy of the country has always been agrarian, but with the expansion of industry, many petrochemical and other science-based industries have shown an increasing interest in this island Commonwealth.

Mr. Thomas H. Suddath, Director of the Executive Development Program says that the management of R. & D. activities has been a prime concern of the College of Business Administration for several years and looks forward to a continuing relationship with Puerto Rico for many years. Other faculty who are involved in the program are Richard Maffei, Director, Management & Computer Sciences Program and Prof. Edgar Huse, Professor of Management.

If you own securities which now have a higher price tag than when you bought them (or any other property which has appreciated in value), did you know that . . .

... you can donate the securities to Boston College... enjoy a tax saving... and get back your original investment to boot? Sounds like having your cake and eating it too, doesn't it? This popular way of making a gift, usually called a donative or bargain sale to charity, can do all these things for you. Here is the way it works.

First, write a letter to Boston College stating that you wish to transfer certain property now owned by you to Boston College. Specify that you intend to give the appreciated value of the property to B.C. and that you want B.C. to remit to you a check covering your original cost for the property.

This is the sales agreement. Under such an agreement, Boston College may at its option retain the property as a part of its endowment fund or sell it outright. Nevertheless, when the property (such as, for example, is delivered by you to Boston College, the sale is legally complete, and the benefits therein are legally yours.

Consider these benefits:

1. Your original investment is returned to you in cash.
2. You avoid all taxes on the appreciated value of the property.
3. In the year in which you make the gift you are entitled to an income-tax deduction equal to amount by which the property has risen in value since you purchased it. This means, of course, an additional tax saving, more cash in hand for you.
4. For you have the satisfaction of having made a meaningful gift to Boston College at a minimum cost to yourself.

Let's see how it might work in a particular case. Donor owns securities with a current value of $8,000. They cost him $5,000. He sells the securities to Boston College for $5,000 and executes a letter stating his desire that Boston College keep the appreciation in value.

Now note what happens to Mr. Donor's financial position. He has, of course, avoided all taxes on his profit, and he has made himself eligible for an income-tax deduction that year of $3,000 (the difference between his original cost and the fair market value of the securities on the date of the sale). But there is more. If he is in a 50% tax bracket, he realized also $1,500 in cash (50% of $3,000). If his tax rate is 30%, he has an additional $900 (30% of $3,000) cash realization.

GEORGIA

Although our Alumni in Georgia are not numerous, Warren Trifiro, '31 has initiated a program to establish contact with other B.C. graduates in

And he has made a generous gift to Boston College as well.

A bargain sale of appreciated property to Boston College is less costly to the donor than the outright gift of property, since the cash realization is greater. However, Boston College receives less from a bargain sale than from an outright gift of the entire property. You should consider both of these factors before deciding which of the two methods to use in making your gift.

A FEW WORDS OF CAUTION

If you transfer listed securities to Boston College by means of a bargain sale, there is ordinarily no difficulty in determining fair market value. It will be the selling price quoted on the date of sale. You should, however, take care to sell the securities directly to Boston College and not transfer them to a broker to sell "for the account of Boston College." If a broker handles the transaction for you, the Internal Revenue Service may hold that the broker is your agent, an interpretation that could make the donor liable for taxes on the gain.

The value of property other than listed securities (e.g. real estate, objects of art) is not always so easily established. Opinions may vary widely as to actual value. You would be wise, if you intend to donate such property to Boston College, to ask your attorney to consult an acknowledged expert appraiser before making the gift. In that way you will be taking reasonable precautions against possible disagreement at a later date between you and the Internal Revenue Service.

A donative or bargain sale of property to Boston College can be your best way.

Yes, a donative or bargain sale of property to Boston College can be advantageous to you as well as to Alma Mater. If the idea appeals to you, let's talk it over and try to find the most beneficial to both you and the University.

INAUGURATION

College's role in the growth and development of the city: "Over the last 100 years, the growth of Boston College has mirrored the changes in Boston's life... The worth of an urban community is judged in large part by the vitality and creativity of its intellectual life" and because of institutions like Boston College, "Boston is unequaled."

Dr. Thomas O'Connor, Vice Chairman of the University Academic Senate, and Michael C. Ryan, President of the Undergraduate Government, spoke for the faculty and students, respectively. Dr. O'Connor, recognizing the function of the President in regard to the faculty, stated, "It is as the intellectual leader of the academic community that the university president gives shape and form and direction to the ultimate purposes toward which the ends of scholarship are to be directed." Ryan insisted that Father Joyce, by his "openness, honesty, and courage", had already earned the respect of the students and he pledged student cooperation in solving the problems of the university.

Dr. Nathan M. Pusey, President of Harvard University, spoke in behalf of all the nation's universities. Pusey noted that Joyce was the first Harvard Alumnus to become President of Boston College and warned the new president of the trials ahead. Referring to Joyce he said, "Fried, Economist, business leader, he has for many years devoted himself to questions of deep community concern and has demonstrated over and over again that colleges and universities, while pursuing their proper tasks of spreading an advancing knowledge, have a most important responsibility to help, where and when they are most able, with problems outside their walls."

In a letter read by Fr. Charles Donovan, S.J., Senior Vice President of the College, President Johnson congratulated Father Joyce: "We are in the midst of an unusually difficult and demanding time — a time that tests even the most sacred of our national traditions. But men like you renew our hopes that we shall persevere, and refresh our spirits with the promise of better days."

James F. Stanton, president of the Alumni Association, welcomed the new President on behalf of all the Alumni. Stanton commented on the President's and alumni's mutual role in meeting the student's challenge: "Today, the youth are making their concern ever more known, and we, as responsible adults, must recognize their mature and constructive response to the challenges of society... the knowledge and experience of our generation must respond to the courage and concern of youth through communication and coordination of effort. Our hope in the future lies, not in the false security of personal material gain, but in our sensitivity to the problems of society." Explaining the university's task in this regard, Stanton said, "It must strive not only to give students a means by which to make a living but must also give them a reason for which to live."

In his inaugural address, Father Joyce presented his concept of the duties and responsibilities of a university president. Father Joyce said, "One of the most terrifying aspects of the academic world today is the emergence of nihilism," and attributed this condition to "a general confusion as to the role of the chief administrative officer of the university." Although frowning on confining the president's role to "fund-raising and public relations," Joyce did not want a return to "the days of... the great autocrat in higher education whose word was law and whose power permeated the entire academic community." Rejecting the concept of a "politician president" with "the inference that such a figure can somehow keep everyone in his community happy at all times", Joyce presented the president's role as the figure who sets the pace of university action and confronts the various forces of the university fairly and openly. He said, "I should like to put myself on record as unafraid of the dedicated student activist wherever he occurs." Concluding he stated, "The university works on and with the most precious raw material the world has to offer, the minds, hearts and persons of the young. Perhaps this is why the academic community can never be organized as efficiently as the large business corporation. Our product, like our raw material is volatile and unpredictable." The yardstick by which a university is judged, he said, "rests upon how freely we open avenues to the pursuit of truth. Ultimately it is this pursuit and transmission of truth that can alone justify the very existence of our universities and warrant the role of those who stand as their leaders."

The ceremony was completed with the presentation of the presidential charter and medallion to Father Joyce. The medallion was made especially for the occasion by Allison Macomber, the Artist-in-Residence, and will be presented to all future presidents.

In keeping with the ecumenical spirit of the occasion, the benediction was given by Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, President of the Massachusetts Board of Rabbis. After the inauguration a reception was held in McElroy Commons.

HOCKEY

Hockey Coach John "Snooks" Kelley

1969 Captain Mike Flynn

The season was 1932-33, a milestone in Boston College varsity hockey annals. It was Coach John "Snooks" Kelley's first season at the helm of the Eagles' hockey fortunes which commenced an era of glorious tradition at the Heights. Today, some 36 years later, the era and tradition continue with no end in sight. In 32 seasons, "Snooks" has compiled 441 victories with the promise of many more to come.

Things have changed over the years, however. It seems that every year now features a new team, with a new program and a new approach. Competition has been getting tougher every year and with the 1968-69 season just around the corner, ten or eleven teams figure to fight it out on equal terms for E.C.A.C. Division I laurels.

But throughout all these years, there has been one common denominator: Coach John A. "Snooks" Kelley, the man, the coach, the personality, the one who best personifies the spirit of Boston College.

Within the span of this era, "Snooks" teams have recorded 30 winning seasons, 9 New England titles, seven Eastern Championships, and nine invitations to the National Championships, winning it once and twice playing off in the Final game. Last year was a "typical season": 19 victories, second in the E.C.A.C. Tournament, and once again in the N.C.A.A. Tourney. All of this was during a "rebuilding" year with sophomores dominating the squad. But this year, the team has matured and further success is in the offing. This is not a "rebuilding" year.

Lost through graduation are Steve Dowling, Gordie Clarke, Whitey Allen, and Jeff Cohen, but returning are 15 lettermen possessing the hustling and spirited attitudes which have typified Kelley-coached teams throughout the years.

Captain Mike Flynn leads the talented group. If ever there was anyone who worked harder at the game to improve, one would have to go a long way back to recall. Flynn has shown such amazing improvement in two short years that he finds himself at left wing on the first line with a pair of great prospects, Paul Schilling and Tim Sheehy. Schilling, a transfer student from West Point, was eligible for only ten games last season, but still managed to register eight goals and ten assists, an amazing point per game production. And the incomparable Sheehy needs no introduction. He led the team in scoring last year with 27 goals and 30 assists for 57 points, the second highest total ever accumulated by a Boston College sophomore. With such scoring power, Tim's excellent all-around skills sometimes go unnoticed.

Kevin Ahearn anchors the second wave with Charlie Toczylowski and John Snyder flanking him. Ahearn, 14-23-37 last year, was named New England's Unsung Hero for his performance and is primed for even a more outstanding year. Snyder, 16-22-38, possesses great speed and quickness and is a fine two-way player. "Toz" is a real scrapper and hustler who'll add size and more scoring power to the line. Seniors Willy Putnam and Jim Prevet, junior Tim Smythe, and sophomores Joe Keaveney and Fred Willis, the football star, are fighting it out for the remaining forward positions.

The defense should be especially strong with the return of Paul "The Shot" Hurley. Hurley played with the U.S. Olympic team last year but scored 32 goals while playing forward at B.C. two seasons ago.

Holy Cross Club of Boston Sponsors 24th Annual O'Melia Award Dinner

The 24th O'Melia Award will be presented to the outstanding player in the November 30th football game between Boston College and Holy Cross at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel on Thursday, December 12 at 7 p.m. A reception at 5:30 p.m. will precede the dinner which is sponsored by the Holy Cross Club of Boston. The Award is named for the late Captain Edward O'Melia, and memorializes the athletes of the two institutions who gave their lives during World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Ticket reservations are now being accepted and may be made on the form found below. No tickets are sold at the door, so please order before December 5th. Tickets are available in tables of ten ($80) and individually ($8). Extreme care is given to requests for seating with friends and classmates.

James L. Hughes, Jr. of Swampscott is Chairman of the Dinner, and Red Sox Traveling Secretary Thomas B. Dowd of West Roxbury will be the Toastmaster. Head Table guests include Very Reverend W. Seavey Joyce, S.J., and Very Reverend Raymond J. Swords, S.J., the Presidents respectively of Boston College and Holy Cross, Head Football Coaches Joe Yukica and Tom Boisture, the Football Captains, various officials of the Athletic Associations and Alumni Offices of each school, and of course, the 1968 O'Melia Award recipient. The evening concludes with the singing of the alma matus around 10:15 p.m.

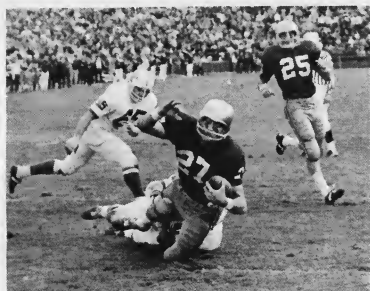

B. C. HOCKEY Home Opening Game Yale December 4

He is returning to defense, his natural position, and Coach Kelley terms him "as one of the best in the country." Steve Cedorchuk, last year's Most Improved Player will team with Hurley on the first blueline pairing. Junior John Sullivan, a converted center and an ever-improving defenseman, and either Barry McCarthy or Ray Bastarache will form the second duo.

In goal is George McPhee who "Snooks" rates as "the key to our season", backed up by John Burnett. McPhee, after an excellent sophomore year, slipped a bit to a 3.84 average last year, but was hampered by the effects of mononucleosis. He rates right up there with Cornell's Ken Dryden as one of the best in the country.

Another rugged schedule and tremendous competition cautions against over-optimism, but look for the Eagles to be in there fighting again for top honors this season.

B.C. Football in Stretch Drive ---

DAVE BENNETT - The hard-driving Andover senior halfback in a familiar role this season - driving for a touchdown! Dave has scored 9 in 5 games this season, 6 rushing and 3 on pass reception. He ranks with the nation's leaders in scoring and in rushing. This picture shows Bennett scoring against Buffalo. (BC had 4 TD's in this game and Dave scored all 4).

In between the Penn State football game of October 26 and the Army game of November 9, the Boston College football team had an open date. Five games are now in the record book for the 1968 season with four remaining to be played on the next four Saturdays.

Head Coach Joe Yukica

Coach Joe Yukica and Co. have a 3 and 2 record to date. This is a .600 percentage in the won and lost column, not bad at all in any league. With a little luck it could have been 4-1.

Incidentally, every last ticket for the Army game was sold as far back as October 17. Quite a tribute to Boston College alumni, students and subway alumni when 10,000 tickets were gobbled up for a game involving a 500 mile trip! Needless to say, they love us at the Army Athletic Association.

DICK KRONER - One of College football's finest defensive linemen. The Wauwatosa, Wisconsin senior is a sure bet for all East hours at middle guard.

There's a very noticeable difference in the performance of our Boston College football players this season and it's paying off on the gridiron. In their own words, all the credit goes to new head coach Joe Yukica and his tremendous young staff.

JOHN SALMON - Defensive safety who has been sparking the defensive backfield. He rates as one of the outstanding defensive backs in college football.

These same young men who have suffered through two 4-6 seasons, are quick to say they have complete confidence on the field because they are completely prepared, mentally as well as physically. What it really all boils down to is the fact that Yukica and his assistants have inspired these boys, made them believe in themselves again and restored the B.C. pride of old into the football program at the Heights once again.

BARRY GALLUP - Senior end from Swampscott who's 26 receptions (for 377 yards and 2 td's) thus far this season, have boosted him to third among all-time Eagle receivers with a career total of 66. Barry has an excellent shot overtaking both Art Graham (in second place with 70) and Jim Whalen (who ranks first with 73 receptions).
